NO SPARE ROOM

By LILLIAN MacDONALD

"ONE thing does make me happy," said little Mrs. Lane.

"That's fortunate," said Simon, her husband. "What is it?"

That we simply can't entertain relatives from the country. We literally couldn't put them up."

Simon took his pipe out of his mouth, looked solemnly around the 20 by 14 living, dining, davenport-sleeping, dining room and grinned.

"Might try 'em in the bathtub," he said. "It's large for its size."

"Never," said his wife who was nice but not overweighted with a sense of humor. "No—we're safe. You see, I have six aunts, four cousins, seven uncles, two perfectly nice but enormous grandmothers and grandfathers, a mother and father; they're all large eaters."

"Say no more. I understand," waved Simon, who was hanging a picture. "How does this look?"

"Nice, but crooked."

His wife gently tilted it and put her head to one side. "This unpacking is awful. I'm hungry again already."

Simon sighed, vanished into the kitchenette and produced a delicatessen chicken, radishes and a bottle of beer. They ate.

The bell rang vociferously.

Simon rose, wiped off chickeny fingers and went to the door.

"Simon," his wife heard (she'd had presence of mind to dash for the bathroom with the remnants of food, and hide).

"How you've grown! I simply never would have known you. And married! I must see your wife. I hope she is worthy of you for you were always such a good, sensible boy."

Rapturous hugging and audible kisses followed. Hilda washed her hands vigorously, removed a black spot from her nose and hastily powdered it. Then she tiptoed to the door, holding fast to the handle.

"Hilda!" shouted Simon.

She entered to find the room usurped by the largest person she'd ever seen in her life.

Hilda smiled and came forward with hand outstretched.

"I am Simon's great-aunt Matilda Warren," said the invader. "I heard you were in town and so I made an appointment with my dentist (I have to get a new plate) and I just know you'll love to have me for a few days—until he gets through."

Hilda strove to master a groan.

"I'm terribly sorry but we have only one room. You see Simon is not rich, yet. He and I just managed this little place, which is cunning for two. But we eat and sleep and live and work, all in this little room."

"Have you no kitchen?" said the great-aunt. Her tone sounded menacing, somehow, but it might have been imagination.

"Simon, come show Mrs. Warren the kitchen!" In a stifled voice from poor Hilda.

"A closet that's all it is! Ridiculous to try and keep healthy in such an absurd way. Er, have you no bathroom?"

"You show her the bathroom," in anguished tones from Simon.

"H'm A nice big tub. Now, children, it seems to me I could make myself right comfortable in that bathtub for the few days Doctor Jones will take to fix my plate. Now, just don't say a word. I'll take my blankets I always take around with me, for one can never tell if hotels and boarding houses are really clean and sanitary. I always take two blankets and I've this nice steamer rug, used when poor Uncle Warren was alive, and we went to Europe (dear, how sick I was!) Well, we'll fix it fine. Here," she opened her suitcase and threw out the formidable but spotless blankets, a Navajo rug, the steamer rug and assorted pillows.

"No, you just get me a light dinner, a steak (only see it's thick) and a few potatoes and cauliflower and some nice oranges and cake (I only want a light dinner) will do fine! I'll help you with the rest of your unpacking and seeing to me you might have done without a piano until you had a bigger apartment and then you could have had the stove outside that closet and been better able to keep house; but I guess you will be able to manage, Hilda. You might give me a tune, something lively; and I will fix that steak myself as soon as Simon brings it in. I'm never so happy as when I'm cooking a good dinner." She stopped breathless, while Hilda merely gasped.

"But Aunt Matilda, there really isn't room. You'd be most frightfully uncomfortable. You couldn't sleep in the bathtub, possibly. Really you couldn't. It might drip and give you rheumatism."

"Now just you leave everything to me. I'll fix everything and here is a nickel, for I must find the exact time from Doctor Jones about my plate." Somehow she swept the hapless couple aside, and found the telephone. "Where'd you put the nickel?" she cried.

"It's not a nickel telephone," said Hilda. "Call anyone you want."

"Telephone service goes with the rent, I suppose. I've heard of it. It's nice to feel you won't be out of pocket by my stay, anyway."

Simon looked at Hilda, speechless. Behind his great aunt's back he kicked at her blankets. "Sh! She'll kill you if you mark them! I don't believe fat people are always so good-natured and your great aunt is worse than all my four relatives put together."

Great aunt beamed. "Doctor Jones says he'll fix it all within a couple of days," said she. "Now let's get busy. I don't like this dull brown paper and those pictures look awful queer to me. What are they?"

"Japanese prints," murmured Hilda.

"A good American picture is good enough for me. Heathenish; they look. Why don't you and Simon go out a few cents and get a good, cheerful landscape and a few nice cows, or a little girl's head?"

We like them, Mrs. Warren, and perhaps as you are good enough to think you can rent—unfurnish for two nights in a bathtub, you won't mind our keeping our prints where they are."

"Keep what you like, my dear, only I think it makes people depressed and queer when they live with queer things, that's all!"

"Where is she?" whispered Simon, entering on tiptoe. Hilda pointed to the "Sh!" mouth.

"Is the bathroom making her bed, I simply won't make up beds in bathrooms, nor will I be responsible for barbarisms. As Simon looked a trifle hurt, she flew to him and putting her arms about his neck whispered, "I'm sorry. But our scheme for no spare room scarcely seems a success."

"I forgot Aunt Matilda. She only comes to town for her plate about every four years, dear, that's all. Anyway, she will stay only one night. I'll see to that."

"But how, Simon? We can't murder her. Nothing else would get her out."

"Listen. When I was a kid I walked in my sleep."

"Well?"

"I might get up early and turn on the shower."

Hilda giggled. "Oh Simon, you mustn't. It might kill her."

"You don't know Great Aunt Matilda. I do."

Stones Reveal Viking Visit to Minnesota in Year 1362

Belief that a tribe of ancient Norsemen visited this territory in the fourteenth century was voiced by F. T. Gustavson, Pequot, Minn., nationally known anthropologist, after a study of several stones at Cormorant lake, near Detroit Lakes, Minn., known as the "Norse Anchor Stones," write a Detroit Lakes United Press correspondent.

After viewing the relics, Gustavson declared that the runic inscription on the famous Kensington Runestone fits them entirely. The inscription reads:

"Eight Goths and 22 Norwegians on exploration—journey from Vinland westward. We had camp by two skerries one day—journey north from this stone. We fished one day. When we returned home we found ten men red with blood and dead. Ave Marie. Save from evil! Have ten of our party by the sea to look after our ships in 14 day journey from this island. Year 1362."

Pamplin H. School

The Pamplin Future Farmers class held its regular meeting on September 19. The officers for the coming school session were elected as follows:

President: Bobbie Hughes, vice-president, Toby Inge; secretary, Edward Irving; treasurer, Ralph Lumpkin; reporter, Billy Inge; watchdog, Edward Webb; conductor, Donald Webb.

After the election the new officers took charge of the meeting, and under their jurisdiction many new and worthwhile standards will be put into action.

We are sorry to state that our former agriculture instructor has resigned. John Cole, a third degree F. F. A. member will substitute until another is appointed.

—Billy Inge, reporter.

School Notice

To all county schools:

The Times Virginian invites the various schools of the county to do two things:

1. Send in live news articles to us for publication in the home county paper.

We are more than glad to open our columns to teachers and to pupils to tell what is going on in the schools of Appomattox county. We suggest that a reporter be appointed by each school.

2. We invite the teachers to use the current history news columns of the Times Virginian for study as a regular classroom feature. Each week you will find, usually on pages 2 and 3, a summary of the national and world news. It is ideal to keep both teacher and pupil abreast of the times.

Appomattox School News

By THELMA KING

The Appomattox high school held its first assembly for this session on Wednesday of last week. A junior league was organized in the high school, with Marvin Godsey as chairman, Ruth Hesson was nominated secretary, treasurer.

There are to be four divisions of the league, each having specific duties to perform. The annual state junior league will be held at this school in the spring. We are looking forward to having one of the banner leagues of the state. We cannot do it unless we have cooperation from all the students.

Each class has organized and each is going to be putting forth great effort to make this a success.

With the help of Miss Lucy LaGrand and W. T. Smith, we hope to soon have an organized team of both basketball and baseball.

We are putting forth a movement to enlarge our school library, by each pupil contributing a pledged fund to be given monthly.

We are very fortunate this year in having with us Miss Savage, who is our county supervisor. With her help we hope to conquer new ideas in our school work and make A. H. S. rank among the best schools of our state.

Richmond Colts win Piedmont League pennant.

Detroit Tigers clinch American League flag.

Virginia is in the front rank of states in the protection of bank deposits, it is disclosed by M. E. Bristow, state banking commissioner, who says that 190 of the 192 active state banks now carry Federal deposit insurance.

Lynchburg Fair Exhibits Are A Big Feature Of Annual . . . Fair

Unusually large crowds have attended the annual fair in Lynchburg this week. Two record days are expected tomorrow and Saturday.

The fair boasts an attractive display of exhibits, appealing to farmers in this section. In addition there is the usual midway, which gives the average in Lynchburg each year.

The streets of Lynchburg are decorated with flags in honor of the week.

The management of the fair points out that there are more than three thousand exhibits in the various halls. There are about a thousand chickens in the poultry show. Canned fruits and vegetables are in evidence and they were all of high quality.

The exhibits also include pies, cakes, bread, needlework and children's handiwork, including dozens of little figures carved from soap.

There are more than 40 shows and rides in the midway.

CAN JOIN NAVY NOW

Lieut. Frank Monroe Jr., U. S. Navy, in charge of recruiting act ivities the state of Virginia, announces that the suspension (of enlistments in the state due to the infantile paralysis was removed on September 18, and recruiting resumed. The quota for the state of Virginia has been increased to compensate for the loss of enlistments during the period or suspension.

The Navy personnel is being increased by several thousand additional young men and vacancies now exist. Enlistments are now being accepted.

KEEPING UP WITH AAA

The amendments to the AAA became law when President Roosevelt signed the amending bill on August 24. The amendments have two main purposes: to make sure the adjustment meets the requirements of constitutionality and to strengthen and clasify the farm program in the light of two year's experience.

The new four year wheat program was started last month. The sign up is now under way. Because this year's crop will be shorter than expected, wheat contract signers may plant 95 instead of 85 per cent of their base acreage for next year.

A program for adjusting the production of rye harvested as grain has recently gone into effect A processing tax of 46 cents a bushel on rye processed for domestic consumption as food for humans is now in operation.

Growers of fire cured, dark air cured, cigar types and burley tobacco have voted overwhelmingly for a continuation of the tobacco adjustment programs which expire next year.

Last month 3,000 farmers met in 9 state conferences to talk over the future corn—hog programs. A hearing is being held in Washington this week. A nation wide referendum will probably be held this fall. .
